FLORIDA CATTLE WAX FAT

Florida cattlemen are increasing the size of their animals at the expense of their mileage. There was a time when cattle on the range had to go at almost a lope all day in order to get a bait of grass. Sometimes they traveled at a speed that took off the flesh faster than the cows take to it. But now the cattle are provided with pastures and are getting too fat to be in the good racing condition that kept them alive on the range.

Pastures have slowed them down to less than a walk, and where the carpet grass has got a good hold the cows take two or three mouthfuls at every step instead of two or three roads to every mouthful. The animals now are no longer good for racing or even for walking, so they carry them to place in trucks. It has been the most got so with some herds that the animals try to jump into every truck they see like hunting dogs. This naturally disgusts the cattlemen so now when the beasts get too fat they sell them to the butcher as about the only thing they are good for.

We helped eat one of these coddled yearlings the other day and we must say it's an insult to Florida cattle to compare them with Western beef. The new pasture-fed cattle don't have the physical endurance of the conditioned pine-woods marathon runner, but when they come on the table they can give a handicap to all rivals.

They are no longer streamlined for speed, but they have already brought the industry into the national lead for the home stretch and that's plenty fast enough. —Orlando Sentinel.

FLORIDA'S NEW FIRST LADY

By nominating Spessard Holland for the governorship, voters also nominated for the position of first lady of Florida, a gracious, cultured woman who will preside over the mansion in Tallahassee with becoming dignity and charm.

It was to Lakeland that dashing young Spessard Holland came to win his bride after heroic action in the world war which won for him a citation for distinguished service.

She was Mary Groover, and to numerous Polk countrymen who have known her since her girlhood, she is just plain, hospitable Mary. She is a friendly, sympathetic and vivacious woman, and is intensely devoted to her illustrious husband and their four children.

She has an intelligent interest in public affairs and is splendidly qualified to meet state and social obligations that will fall upon her as the wife of the governor. —Lakeland Ledger.

Summer Months Demand Special Vigil In Driving

Children and Young Folks
 Particularly Subject To Accidents

Driving in the summer, when all of the 30,000,000 vehicles in the country seem to be out on the same time, can be a pleasure at a nightmare.

After coming with many experienced motorists, the National Conservation Bureau, accident prevention division of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies, issues a special warning which, if followed, will save the driver and his family much grief during coming months.

The number of serious motor vehicle accidents begins to climb during early summer, and continues to rise almost without a break throughout the warm months. Bureau experts point out on the basis of three-year averages. Younger people suffer most from the summer mishaps during this period. According to the latest complete figures, children under five have the highest proportion of traffic deaths in July and August. August also is the high month in the 5 to 14 year group, while September is the peak for persons 15-24 years of age.

Pedestrian deaths from motor vehicle accidents, the Bureau points out, start climbing rapidly in July and continue upward every month until the end of the year. Summer months, incidentally, are the highest not only for motor vehicle fatalities but for all types of accidental deaths.

To Live Longer

Motorists who would avoid trouble on the road this summer the National Conservation Bureau offers the following hints:

1. If you are a family man planning an automobile vacation on a fairly close budget, keep in mind that every ten miles driven to the speed rate adds dollars in gasoline and oil costs and in tire and engine wear. The added strain may also cause some parts to give out that under normal driving might have lasted a long time.

2. Sliding around curves is a frequent cause of accidents in summer. One may skid even if he is dry. Sand or pebbles collected on the outside of a curve may prevent the tires from gripping the pavement while the car's off balance in making the turn. The way to be safe is to slow down everywhere if the road is wet, and always, wet or dry, at curves.

3. Rain brings two difficulties to the driver. It tends to make the road surface slippery, and it decidedly reduces visibility. The best method of meeting both handicaps is to reduce speed.

Keep Inside That Line

4. Overtaking is another prolific source of danger on crowded summer highways. Improper passing is the result either of ignorance or unjustified haste. The double line down the middle of the road, now used in some states at points dangerous for passing, is a safe guide for the driver to follow and should never be violated.

5. Because of longer daylight many drivers are tempted to stay at the wheel too long. Trying to "hress" your way through large cities after doing 200 or 300 miles a made more dangerous by fatigue. Pushing on at night after driving a good part of the day is doubly hazardous, as it adds fatigue to the normal hazards of night.

6. When more than one person is in the car on a long trip, use the exchange system. At the more experienced driver take the wheel through cities and on crowded highways, then give over to the relief driver on the easier stretches.

7. Heat punishes tires greatly, especially on long runs. A good idea to get out and check the tires when you stop for gas in the road.

8. The experienced driver not only carries information about traffic conditions on the main highways over which he is to travel, but tries to avoid being near large cities on week-ends and holidays.

9. If possible, plan to follow good roads where traffic is comparatively light, rather than congested highways where it is usually heavy.

10. Another holiday-driving tip is to start out early and start back early.

3 MORE MONTHS.

Report has it that it will require another three months to complete the surfacing of Road No. 26 from South Bay leading into Ft. Lauderdale and Miami.

New Sinclair Gas Is Well Received

"Sinclair dealers in this area have been supplied with the new Double-Range Sinclair gasoline, according to A. E. Kirchman, agent for the Sinclair Refining Company in this territory. 'Motorists in this community,' Mr. Kirchman pointed out, 'now have an opportunity to try, in their own cars, the result of the latest advancement in petroleum refining.'"

"The outstanding feature of the new Sinclair gasoline," Mr. Kirchman stated, "is the fact that it has double-range anti-knock. It actually gives high anti-knock performance in the low-speed range and the high-speed range as well. Some gasolines," Mr. Kirchman continued, "may give high anti-knock one of the other of these ranges of speed but not in both."

"The low speed range," Mr. Kirchman explained, "is from 10 to 45 miles per hour where you need knockless power for ordinary pickup in traffic. The high speed range is 45 miles per hour and higher where you need extra high anti-knock for travel on the open highway or for sudden sports of speed to pass other cars."

"In actually manufacturing a gasoline to deliver double-range anti-knock without extra cost, Sinclair technicians have employed two different methods to produce the double-range quality in Sinclair H-C Gasoline. One method makes use of newly developed cracking processes which control the type of hydrocarbon in the finished gasoline. The other method is through the addition of tetraethyl lead."

"Process in Sinclair refining methods has not been sudden but constant. The new double-range gasoline is the result of many years of continuous 'improvement in refining.' Mr. Kirchman concluded. Our newest Sinclair product has been very well received by the motoring public wherever it has been introduced."

"Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barwick and children have gone to Thomasville, Ga., for a visit with relatives and on business."

FULLER'S FULMINATIONS

by Fuller Warren

(Editor's Note: Fuller Warren, recent casualty in the gubernatorial race, has turned candidate. So entertaining and interesting is Fuller's "stuff" that we plan to use it now and then.)

The verdict of the voters in the first primary election set the seal of silence on lips that have been so busy being vocal during the ensuing four years. Not being permitted to be heard from the hustings during the coming year, I have decided to try to become an uncompensated columnist this way. I hope to keep alive those pleasant relations I have enjoyed with the people of Florida for the past several years. I hope to console myself for this excellent outlet of enlightenment and civic progress.

It is meet and proper that I should make a statement of policy as a political pundit. This should have been done in my maiden message last week. But I was still a little "shell-shocked" from the barrage of ballots that were cast for other candidates, and I completely forgot to set forth a statement of policy. I am resolutely determined to be verbose and profuse. I will never use an adjective where I can be crowded in. I will not be so much concerned with the meaning of words, as with the appeal they make to the aesthetic sense. In short, I will be more concerned with sound than with sense.

I propose to do a little light playing, but I will vary myself to avoid violating the copy right laws. And in turn, every body may cry my stuff without giving me either credit or cash.

In fact, I feel flattered to have some of my stuff "lifted" by other literary lions.

These weekly "state papers" will deal primarily with politics. But occasionally I will waver from my course and give a little homily on home, a short sermon on service, or an effusive essay on education. In the wide diversity of range of my discussions I might even touch lightly on finance, and occasionally make a brief excursion into the realm of religion.

I am not going to write anything unkind about anybody. I like everybody. I have no fault to find with anybody. I think it is none of my business what my neighbor does or fails to do, so other people's faults don't violate any other person's privacy.

I don't like a lot of conditions. And I find fault with some institutions. I may occasionally take a pot-shot at some condition or institution. But, for reasons that are self-evident, I will assiduously refrain from making any attack on the great institution that is publishing this stuff—no matter how I may feel.

The recent campaign confirmed my faith in the fairness of the public and the press. I addressed many people who I knew had little regard for me personally, and less regard for my platform, and were always courteous and considerate in the hearing of my speech. I was backed up one time, and then by a dump.

The people were always generous with their applause, even if they were a little stingy in places with their votes.

I found that the people are very well informed about public matters. Several times when I inadvertently made a misstatement of fact about a public question people would come up after the speaking and politely correct me which I always appreciated.

I was encouraged and reassured by leaps of the side-spread interest on the part of the people in their government. A few years ago it was feared that the apathy and indifference of the people to governmental problems would produce disastrous consequences. But there is no longer any ground for that fear. The tremendous crowds that turned out to hear candidates in almost every part of the state in the recent campaign show the interest the people have in their government. And the overwhelming majority that voted in the election, but were prevented from doing so by the long ballots and insufficient voting machines, further proves the interest the people have in their government. So long as our citizens continue to do so, I have no doubts about the future of our country.

I have long had a respect for the press that amounts almost to reverence. I cherish a free press equally with free speech. I have followed the fight for a free press from the time of the Boston Tea Party in 1773 down to the recent decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, declaring unconstitutional a Louisiana law that required license to the press. And I have rejoiced every time an assault upon the freedom of the press has been repelled. I have long realized that a free press is the grand palladium of the people's liberty.

But I have also realized that it was not enough for the press to be just free. If it is to truly serve its great function in a democracy it must also be FAIR.

I found the Florida press in the recent campaign to be absolutely fair. None of the dailies and few of the weeklies supported my candidacy for Governor, but all of them (with one lone exception) were fair in their treatment of the news accounts of my speeches. They were given a strictly factual treatment, and they were accorded a prominence equal to that given to the paper's chosen candidate. The editorial comment on my candidacy was not exactly as I would have written it, but it was never libelous or untrue. A few times I was struck a little below the belt by editorial blows, as a result of which I was induced by the frenzy of political partisanship for the paper's anointed candidate, but none of it was deliberately or maliciously untrue.

I was gratified to learn that there is an essential unity between the people of all parts of Florida. Before the campaign I had heard a lot of talk about sectionalism. Some said that there was a "settled animus on the part of people in some parts of Florida against people living in other parts of the State. I didn't find any such feeling. I didn't ever find any pronounced feeling of the part of small counties against large counties.

I found that the people of all Florida are almost one big family. And that is not just a trite figure of speech. It is literally true. I met hundreds of people down in South Florida who had moved there from North or West Florida. They had kinfolks back up where they came from. Many of them kept up a correspondence with the folks back home. They are almost as interested in what happens back where they move from as they are in what is going on where they are living.

I found that there is a growing realization that what adversely affects one part of Florida ultimately hurts the entire State, and that what helps one part of the State, ultimately benefits all Florida.

I had hoped to reach the point in this installment of imparting to the public the political trivia I picked up in my travels over the State. But I have allowed my self to get so absorbed in a pot-shot at the long ballots and insufficient voting machines on the social and ideological aspects of the campaign that I have used up all the space before getting around to these tiresome tidbits.

I had planned to pass out today. Next week I hope to tell you the fantastic tale of a sheriff who got himself re-elected by deliberately and wilfully running over a sow and a litter of pigs. Such an exclamatory utterance of the patricians of ancient times, signifying that they had said a mouthful.

INVESTIGATED MURDER

The June grand jury is, on day session at West Palm Beach investigated the murder of George Evans, at South Bay, on April 20th, and recommended that Henry Barber, who has been held on suspicion, be released from custody, pending further investigation by the state's attorney. Evans' dead body was found in his car in the canal near Little Cuba, where it is alleged that Barber and Evans had engaged in a fight.

IMPORTANT DECISION

The Florida Supreme Court has passed down a decision that entrances to service stations, located on either public or private property, are a part of the public highway system. The decision was passed down in a damage suit wherein a man had been killed while his car was parked in a service station driveway awaiting service.

Progress Is Made On New Hospital To Assist Children

Foundation To Be Laid The First Week Of July

Activity along the South Florida Crippled Children's Hospital and School front, offers encouragement and grounds for hope to children whose future lives are at stake.

Laying of the foundation for the first unit of the hospital-school is to be built this summer in Shesley Park, a few blocks directly west of the Biltmore Hotel, tentatively has been set for the first week in July.

A South Florida branch of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis was organized Friday night with A. J. (Jack) Cleary as permanent chairman; Roscoe Brunstetter, Vice Chairman; Dr. A. H. Weiland, Secretary; and E. C. Romf, Treasurer.

Dr. Weiland, surgeon for the Florida Crippled Children's Commission and Vice President of both the South Florida Crippled Children's Society and the hospital corporation, left Monday for New York to confer with officials of the National Foundation regarding details of establishment here of a research unit of the foundation, to study the cause and control of infantile paralysis.

County units are the general plan of organization, but since crippled children's work is well organized in the South Florida district, permission for a 10-county unit organization was granted.

A meeting of prominent citizens will be called next week for the purpose of forming a planning committee to devise ways and means of meeting an emergency which exists due to three factors which have a bearing on the future of the hospital-school: 1. Possibility of a major outbreak of infantile paralysis during the coming summer was indicated last Thursday by the United States Public Health Service; 2. Failure of the proposed school bonds in Dade County in last week's election, and; 3. Apparent failure of citizens of Dade and other counties to respond in sufficient numbers to the appeal for local membership in the hospital-school.

It is decided, however, to proceed with the building as soon as architect's drawings are completed.

Thursday's press release from the U. S. Public Health Service emphasized additional need for the hospital. The report stated that there were in the United States more than six times as many cases of poliomyelitis last year as in 1938, and that because many communicable diseases seem to recur in waves, the health service physicians plan to keep a close check on the spread of the dread disease this summer.

Dr. George V. MacDonell, head of Miami health department, was quoted at the organization as stating there was but one case in Miami last year. The national average for cities of similar size is 10 cases. Miami's average is two.

It is believed that establishment of a research unit in South Florida where few cases originate but many come for convalescence from areas where the dread disease is common, will enable physicians of this area better to cooperate with national health service in the study of the disease and to assist in keeping a close check on its possible spread.

W. L. Philbrick, president of the Crippled Children's Society and of the hospital unit, accompanied Dr. Weiland as far as Washington and Baltimore, where they will inspect hospitals for handicapped children, Mr. Philbrick returning to Miami Wednesday and Dr. Weiland continuing on the New York.

Splendid Program For School Pupils

Tallahassee, June 6. A program for improvement of personal guidance for pupils in Florida schools will be organized June 7 at the University of Florida, at Gainesville, to assist in the work of the State Department of Education.

The directors are H. W. Chandler, dean of the University of Florida, representing the Florida Association of Colleges and Universities; Superintendents T. W. Lawton, of Sanford, E. B. Brown, of Maitland, and W. E. Williams, of Live Oak, representing the Florida Association of County Superintendents; and Paul Edley, of the State Department of Education.

Tentative plans call for state-wide committees to prepare individual pupil record forms covering information for use of classroom teachers and principals. Guidance specialists in the various Florida colleges will assist teachers in adjusting school activities to meet individual needs.

The Education Association will cooperate in the preparation of materials for state-wide use under leadership of Thos. D. Bailey, of Tallahassee.

Membership in the program will be confined to counties in which school officials budget funds for individual pupil records and supplies and to schools which establish definite guidance responsibilities and agree to conduct the program for at least three years. The guidance program encompasses the state-wide testing program, which will be continued to the extent that achievement and aptitude tests are found valuable for individual guidance of pupils.

The directors will present a program to their convention at county superintendents at Daytona Beach June 12-14.

Pamphlet Pictures Florida In Summer For Folks Up North

State Hotel Commission Issues Interesting Publication

Tallahassee, June 6.—"Discover Florida in the Summer" is the title of an attractive pamphlet now being distributed through Florida and northern states from the office of W. M. Taylor, state hotel commissioner.

"We expect that this booklet will go far toward making Florida a more popular summer vacation spot," Commissioner Taylor said, "and we have printed it and are distributing it as one of the many services the hotel commission renders to the people of the state."

The pamphlet is printed in four colors, and portrays in word and picture the many reasons for making Florida a vacation land, particularly in the summer time.

Still another page carries an official welcome to summer vacationers in Florida from Governor Fred P. Cone.

"You will find life at its best here in the Empire of the Sun, and, like so many who come to tarry for just a while, you may stay or leave only to return again to establish a permanent home where frontiers of new development and opportunity yet challenge," the governor's welcome said in part.

The interior of the booklet carries a series of nine vacation pictures, ranging from tiny tots at play on Florida beaches to fishing scenes, and a view of palm-lined ocean front thoroughfares.

Another section of the booklet tells of the means employed by Florida, through the hotel commission, to safeguard the health of all persons patronizing hotels, apartment houses, restaurants, and rooming houses. The matter in which high health standards are stressed and maintained is described as one of the means by which the correct and safe construction or remodeling of any structures under the supervision of the hotel commission.

Commissioner Taylor said the pamphlet has been received with acclaim in the communities through the state and the north to which it has already been sent, and that many requests for additional pamphlets have been received and are being filled as rapidly as possible. The hotel commissioner added that copies of the pamphlet will be sent to persons who request them.

Shipments Cease—

beans, peppers and mixed were forwarded. Company freight agents predicted 6,000 cars for the season, and it was reached, and would have gone heavier had not the rainy season appeared so suddenly and persistently.

While much of the tomato crop was damaged by the rains, there are some growers who believe that there are enough developing tomatoes not injured that it will pay to pick same for truckers. This is true over on the South Bay and Lake Harbor section.

Truckers have had a big season out of the Glades and while estimated on the car load shipment comparison it is believed that tomato was moved in this fashion to practically double the rail shipments.

Some fine peppers are now being picked up by truckers.

Glades Towns Show—

districts have been developed, thus adding additional acreage to the farming area, where such minimum crops are raised, harvested and marketed. This has also brought about the need of packing houses which the area is now well supplied.

Power has been provided for home, store, and plants by the Florida Power and Light company, which it being found necessary to expand its operations to meet the growing demands.

Belle Glade has also added to its growth and population, and public utility facilities. Belle Glade now has a modern water system, a fine white way, a big investment in packing houses, new homes and business blocks, and a population that is outstanding in its citizenship. A system of street improvements and drainage is to be installed this year.

The city can be proud of its fine new city hall, and the most important new projects that the city desires and will work for in the future is a banking institution and a high school unit.

NEW INSPECTOR

Frock Baxter, well known Pahokee man, has been chosen by the Pahokee city council to be the new city building, sanitary and electric inspector, and he has entered upon his duties. Frock succeeds George Rogers, who has served in that position for something over a year.

OFF FOR CAROLINA

Elick Chaney and J. T. Fuqua, local truck operators, this week moved their trucks and driving cars to Lake City, South Carolina, from which source they will truck vegetable cargoes to the Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York markets. Lake City is a big market for vegetables raised in the south. The truck run to New York is around 700 miles, so that several round trips a week can be made by each truck.

MOVES TO LABELLE

G. C. Hodge, former county agent of Glades county and recently defeated for sheriff, has moved his family to Labelle. He has taken up an official position with the State Marketing Board with headquarters in Jacksonville.
